

RALEIGH DIVORCE LAWYER JAMES W. HART OPENS NEW LAW PRACTICE SERVING THE RESIDENTS OF WAKE COUNTY, NORTH CAROLINA

MAY 11, 2010 CARY – On May 3, 2010, Raleigh Divorce Lawyer James W. Hart officially opened his own law practice to serve the residents of Wake County, including Cary and Raleigh.

This has been a year long journey for the Cary Attorney, who formerly operated a family law firm in Orlando, Florida. “My wife and I loved Florida, but ultimately decided that Raleigh was where we wanted to raise a family,” said Mr. Hart. Unfortunately, that meant taking a second bar exam - which Hart passed on the first try this past February. “Thank God I passed – the family part of our plan is on its way!” Mr. Hart’s wife, Donna, is expecting their first child in July.

Mr. Hart intends to practice in the areas of family law and divorce, including complex equitable distribution and alimony matters. Although the law might be different, “I see the same issues here that I saw in Florida. Divorce is never easy, but I take pride that my clients are usually happier when the process is over than they were when they first came in to meet with me. The emotional transformation that these people go through is amazing. My job is to make it as easy as I can for them – guide them step-by-step through the process and make sure they understand all of their legal options.”

Notwithstanding the emotional turmoil that he sees his clients going through, Mr. Hart is up to the challenge – “It is a lot of work operating your own practice, but at the end of the day, I wouldn’t have it any other way. I get to know the clients on such a deep level, and that wouldn’t be possible if I worked for a big firm.”

Indeed, the tagline for Mr. Hart’s firm is “Building Relationships... One Client at a Time.”
